10 TEDDY PETER & THE CASE FOR SHORTER STEPS
Giant technological leaps for jet fighter development — or short manageable steps instead? Professor Keith Hayward FRAeS explores the UK's 1950s procurement dilemma

20 EXCESSIVE FORCE Pt 1

Lennart Andersson opens a two-part series on the attacks made by Japanese military aircraft on the airliners of China's CNAC and Eurasia companies during 1937–41

30 A REVOLUTIONARY APPROACH

Continuing our series on British aerial weapons, using the illustrations of Ian Bott, Barnes Wallis specialist Iain R. Murray takes a technical look at the Upkeep weapon used in the famous Dambusters raid 80 years ago

40 OOH-LÀ-LÀ, C'EST LE QUATRE-MILLE!

Joe Coles shares his passion for Dassault's Super Mirage 4000, relating how the cutting-edge delta combat aircraft became a victim of a classically French existential crisis

48 RAISING STEAM

During 1898–1912 Swedish inventor Carl Richard Nyberg turned his attention to building steam-powered flying-machines; none was successful, as Jan Forsgren relates

56 STRIVING FOR ACCURACY Pt 1

In the first half of a two-parter on the RAF's post-war drive to increase bombing efficiency, James Jackson examines the development of new systems for conventional bombing

66 SPARTAN'S OLYMPIC HOPEFUL

The elegant 1930s Spartan Executive light tourer is fairly well-known — but did you know it was used as the basis for an armed military version? Dan Hagedorn reveals all

76 STORMING PERFORMANCE Pt 2

In the concluding half of his two-part re-assessment of the Westland Whirlwind fighter, Paul Stoddart FRAeS considers whether fitting new engines might have made a difference

86 FULL TILT

Intrigued by a 35mm slide which came to light during a trawl of the TAH photographic archive, the Editor set about finding out more about the Weser P.16 tiltrotor

92 WINGS ARE THE WHEELS OF TODAY!

Ralph Pegram brings his series on the slow development of British freighter aircraft to a close with a survey of the wartime designs mooted by forward-thinking manufacturers

104 ARGENTINA'S BIG CATS-

With the introduction of the Grumman Panther jet fighter into service in 1958, and later the swept-wing Cougar, the Argentinian Navy laid claim to "top cat" status in the region

114 NIMEWACS ANYONE?-

Chris Gibson continues his occasional series on naming RAF aircraft with the — ultimately pointless — search for a moniker for the ill-starred British Aerospace Nimrod AEW.3

120 ARMCHAIR AVIATION

125 LOST & FOUND

126 MY FIRST DECK LANDING

Former Fleet Air Arm pilot Commander John Ford recalls deck-landing training with the US Navy in Florida in 1954
